ADDITIONAL READINGS
The sections of the reading list follow the culture history and regional divisions presented in Discover Illinois Archaeology. Not enough publications on Illinois archaeology are generally available to the public. A few of these readings were written for a public audience, but most have been written in a more technical style. Readers may be able to find some volumes through interlibrary loan, while some older readings are possibly available through digital format on the internet. We have intentionally selected compendiums of specific subjects with the idea that they contain extensive bibliographies that will direct the reader to numerous other sources.
By a recent count, more than 10,000 technical reports, articles, and monographs have been written on Illinois archaeology, and there are probably triple that number of unpublished papers on the subject. We hope this list will provide a place to begin your continued discovery of Illinois archaeology. The list was originally compiled by Duane Esarey, Michael Wiant, and Alice Berkson, and was updated in November, 2009.
